Press release March 10, 2011: ECVC Foundation Board Announces New Chairman and Two New Board Members

ECVC's Foundation Board held its annual meeting on February 21st, 2011. All members of the board were present including Congressman Walter B. Jones on recess from Congress. The current chairman, Spencer Hill, was honored at the meeting for his 25 years of service. The new Chairman, Edwin Gray (pictured), then took over the reins and proceeded by recognizing two new Foundation Board members: Walter Williams, President of Hess-Wilco, and James Earl Jones with Southern Bank (pictured).

The ECVC Foundation Board, founded in 1985, uses its investments to support staff training and the staff awards program. The training is held once a year at the NISH (National Institute for the Significantly Handicapped) Conference and meritorious cash awards are given to employees who are nominated by their coworkers each December.

ECVC, established in 1965, is a nonprofit company with the social mission of "helping people with disabilities attain a higher quality of life through achievement of their vocational goals." The company is self-sustained through Federal and local government contracts.
